

Enfield Falls Mill, Town of Enfield. This Greek Revival-style water-powered grist mill was built in 1839 along Enfield Creek, now within Robert H. Treman State Park. Along with the nearby Miller's House, it was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

1883 Barn, Town of Newfield. This gambrel-roofed barn with its distinctive cupola is located on Route 13 in the Town of Newfield. It was restored and adapted to use as a residence, studio, and gallery by Victoria Romanoff and Constance Saltonstall in the late 1960s.

Rogues Harbor Inn, Town of Lansing. Built in 1830 as the Central Exchange Hotel servicing the stagecoach route between Elmira and Auburn, Rogues Harbor Inn reportedly gained its modern name around 1900 when an inebriated patron hurled a whiskey bottle against the building, proclaiming, "here's to a harbor of rogues." Anchoring the crossroads of South Lansing (formerly called Libertyville), it was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 2008.

Old City Hall, City of Ithaca. The 1966 demolition of this iconic downtown building was a rallying point that led to the formation of Historic Ithaca in the same year. The Seneca Street parking garage now stands on this site. Many community members were stirred to action following the loss of the Old City Hall, Cornell Public Library, and Ithaca Hotel in the late 1960s.

Dotson House, Town of Danby. This private home was designed in 1957 for faculty members Arch and Esther Dotson by Richard Meier while he was an architecture student at Cornell University. It was built in 1967 on an existing barn foundation and utilized many salvaged elements. It was recently restored and rehabilitated by current owners Ron and Shelley Cooper.

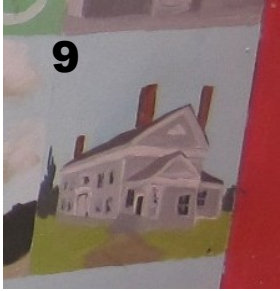

Brookton's Market, Town of Caroline. This circa-1880 former general store is located in the hamlet of Brooktondale. Area residents picked up their mail here before rural delivery was established in the early twentieth century. After a 2009 restoration, it once again serves as a vibrant community hub.

7 Carpenter Barn, Town of Dryden. This 1853 dairy barn, with its distinctive cross-gables and steeply pitched roof, was recently restored by the Carpenter family.

8 Sunnygables, Town of Ithaca. This ornate Gothic Revival farmhouse was owned by H.E. Babcock, Cornell Professor and founder of Agway. The house has served as a restaurant and bed and breakfast in recent years.

9 Halsey House, Town of Ulysses. Built in about 1830 as the home of Nicoll Halsey, a prominent politician, this outstanding Greek Revival house is currently used as a bed and breakfast. It was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1993.

10 Groton High School, Village of Groton. The Classical Revival Groton High School was built in 1919-1920. It is one of over fifty-five Central New York schools designed by the prominent Cortland architect Carl W. Clark. The school was repurposed as office space and housing after its closure in the 1960s. It was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1994.

11 Clinton Hall and Clinton House, City of Ithaca. The Clinton House (1828) and Clinton Hall (1847) were developed by a group of businessmen as Ithaca's earliest hotel-commercial-office complex. The buildings were added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1971 and 1988, respectively.
